Books and Songs to support English Language Learners

Compiled by Kim McGrath, Kindergarten Educator

Phase 1: Beginning

Select picture books or big books that have simple text, sentences that repeat often throughout the story, or may have a pattern, and have large print. These stories need to have rich and detailed illustrations that help support the story.

Phase 1: action songs

Select song and poems that are action based, have rhyme or have a pattern and repeat often. Provide illustrations as a visual cue.

| Morning Circle song:                 | Source: a Kindergarten teacher              |

Phase 2: Emerging

Select books that contain rhyme and repetitive sentence patterns. If you have access to the CD's or big book versions, use them as variations. Books that are based on songs or have strong melody and rhythm work really well. Read and keep re-reading these books. As children become more familiar with them, they are more likely to participate in the reading and may even be observed singing them while at play.

Phase 2: action songs/poems

Use songs or poems that support your daily routine and/or current theme. The more relevant and meaningful vocabulary is to the learner, the more likely he/she will learn it. Songs or poems that include action and movement will more likely keep your learners engaged and motivated. Use visuals, gestures and movement as often as you can.

Phase 3: Developing

At this phase in development children can comprehend short narratives that have a few sentences per page. Stories that have patterns, repetitive phrases and good supporting illustrations work well.
